Cobra is a 1986 American action film directed by George P. Cosmatos and written by Sylvester Stallone, who stars in the titular role. The film, which is loosely based on the novel A Running Duck by Paula Gosling (later published as Fair Game and filmed under that title in 1995), co-stars Reni Santoni, Brigitte Nielsen and Andrew Robinson. Cobra follows Lt. Marion "Cobra" Cobretti, who investigates a string of violent crimes and also protects a witness targeted by the perpetrators.

Cobra is the final film which featured the collaboration between Stallone and Nielsen after Rocky IV (1985) and until Creed II (2018), and the only film the pair are both featured in while married to one another in real life. The script was largely inspired by Stallone's original script for Beverly Hills Cop (1984).

Cobra was released to generally negative reviews with criticism on its excessive violence and overuse of genre tropes, but it was a box office success and also has since been considered as a cult classic.

SYNOPSIS: A mass shooting at a Los Angeles supermarket evolves into a hostage crisis. The Los Angeles Police Department summons Lt. Marion "Cobra" Cobretti, of their elite "Zombie Squad", to resolve the crisis. Cobretti stands off with the shooter, who espouses social Darwinist ideals and mentions a "New World". Cobretti kills him before he can execute a group of hostages. Detective Monte reprimands Cobretti for disregarding police procedure, and Cobretti admonishes a group of reporters for not prioritizing the safety of potential victims.

Unbeknownst to the authorities, the supermarket incident is part of a string of violent crimes in Los Angeles committed by The New World, a social Darwinist cult that despises modern society and believes in killing the weak, leaving only the strongest and smartest to rule. Model and businesswoman Ingrid Knudsen becomes the New World's priority target after she witnesses cultists and their leader "Night Slasher" on a killing spree. She is placed under the protective custody of Cobretti and his partner Sergeant Tony Gonzales after a failed attempt on her life.

After more attempts to kill Knudsen and Cobretti, Cobretti theorizes an organization is responsible but his theory is rebuffed by his superiors. Cobretti and Gonzales move with Knudsen out of Los Angeles to the small town of San Remos, where Cobretti and Knudsen become romantically involved. The New World's second-in-command, Officer Nancy Stalk, infiltrates the police escort. Despite Cobretti's mistrust of Stalk, he does nothing and the group spends the night in a motel.

At dawn, the New World arrives in San Remos on motorcycles and besieges the town, directed by Stalk. In a shootout, Cobretti kills many cultists, but Gonzales is wounded. Cobretti and Knudsen flee in a pickup truck which the cultists wreck with a roadblock. The pair to flee to a steel mill. Cobretti defeats the rest of the cultists, and Stalk is accidentally shot by the Night Slasher.

Fighting the Night Slasher hand-to-hand, Cobretti impales him on a hook that drags him into a furnace. The California Highway Patrol secures San Remos and rescues Gonzales. As Cobretti is cleared by his superiors, Monte initially appears apologetic, only to again chastise Cobretti for "overdoing it". Cobretti punches Monte in the face before riding away with Knudsen on a motorcycle.
