Going the Distance is a 2004 Canadian teen/comedy film directed by Mark Griffiths, and written by Eric Goodman and Kelly Senecal. A road movie set across Canada, its tagline was They came. They saw. They came. The film was released in Canada as Going the Distance, but for American release the film's title was expanded to National Lampoon's Going the Distance. The Canadian DVD release retains its original release title.

Produced by Brightlight Pictures and the first film underwritten in part by MuchMusic, Going the Distance was a brand extension for the music television channel and a foray into theatrical feature films by MuchMusic's then-corporate ownership CHUM Limited.

Recent changes to Telefilm Canada funding rewarded the producers of domestic films that were commercial successes in English Canada, and Going the Distance was a bid for such success.

SYNOPSIS: Nick (Christopher Jacot) has it all figured out - marriage, a lucrative career and a totally different lifestyle from that of his West Coast hippy parents. When he discovers that his future wife Trish (Katheryn Winnick) may be falling prey to a powerful and oversexed music producer Lenny Swackhammer (Jason Priestley) (Nick had sex with Trish on the last day of High school, so they both don't graduate as virgins). Lenny has promised a summer job to Trish in media communications and she hops on a flight to go with him. Nick is worried that Trish never promised to stay loyal to him. Nick's hippy parents try to set Nick up with someone more "free" than Trish, whom they think is controlling him. The hook-up tells Nick that Lenny has a reputation of banging a newbie every yr at the music award (The MuchMusic Video Awards) that he organizes under his production banner.

Nick is determined to fly to Toronto to win her back. He wants to propose to Trish.

Lifelong buds and dedicated surfers Tyler (Shawn Roberts) and Dime (Ryan Belleville) have other ideas for their staid best friend - the road trip adventure of his life. With only three days to make it to the MuchMusic Video Awards, the unlikely road warriors head off. Two sexy hitchhikers, Sasha (Joanne Kelly) and Jill (Mayko Nguyen), complicate matters when Tyler picks them up. The girls are struggling musicians. Dime has the hots for Jill. Meanwhile Nick's parents hire special forces veteran Emile (August Schellenberg) to stop Nick from reaching Trish. Tyler sets fire to the girls' camping gear when he accidentally drops a flaming marsh-mellow on it, at the campsite. The next day they are stopped by cops and Dime reveals that he is carrying a full stash of pot under the dashboard. The cop finds the stash and asks for a bribe to let them go. Nick throws the weed in a stream, but is hit on the head when he runs away from a bear.. When he wakes up Tyler gives him some pain killers, which turn out to be mushroom pills, and Nick goes to la la land for a few hrs.

The next morning, Jill goes skinny dipping and Tyler and Jill follow her. Nick notices Emile putting sugar in their gas tank. Nick and Sasha follow Emile and find a parked car in the woods (which has a police costume, indicating that Emile was the cop and is fake). Nick sabotages Emile's car and the gang drives off after Tyler and Dime are done being perverts. The gang is out of money now. They stop at a carnival to earn some quick cash. Meanwhile Emile catches up with them and goes to town on their van, and removes many nuts and bolts. Then he forces the van to take a detour through a rough road where the parts start falling apart and the van comes to a stop on railway tracks. The kids barely jump out before the train rams into the van. But Emile thinks Nick couldn't jump out and died.

The kids stumble onto a farm and are given shelter by Farmer Joseph (Matt Frewer). Joseph lives with his wife Mother Libby (Jackie Burroughs). They are parents to shy Josephine (Iris Graham). Josephine gives Dime & Jill a blow-job under the table. Joseph throws them out of the house. The kids end up at a Karaoke bar where Sasha belts out a zinger song to win $300. Emile finds them alive at the bar and is relieved. Nick and Sasha end up having sex in a motel that night. The next day they catch a goods train that goes through Toronto. Nick tells Sasha that he is going to propose to Trish, angering her. The kids end up in Montreal as the train never stops at Toronto.

The gang finds a rock band by pure luck, who was also headed to Toronto and they hitch a ride on their private plane. Nick reaches Toronto & meets Trish. Nick finds that he doesn't love the girl anymore and instead loves Sasha (Emile catch up with Nick and stops him. But Nick tells him that he broke up with Trish and now loves Sasha), whom he follows (to her small fishing village where she was working as a waitress for her brothers in their fish and chips restaurants) and proposes
