The Indonesia Emas (Golden Indonesia) 2045 is a national vision marking 100 years of Indonesia's independence. In 2045, it is predicted that Indonesia will reach a demographic bonus where the total population will be dominated by people in the productive age between 15 to 64 years old. If adequately prepared and utilised, the demographic bonus will have a positive impact on the country's economic development. However, the demographic bonus can also bring about negative impacts if not managed well. the abundance of working age people who do not have skills and expertise can lead to increased unemployment, crime, poverty and hamper economic growth. Therefore, the quality of the human resources is the key determinant of Indonesia's future.
